What is Retinitis Pigmentosa?

RP for short is the name given to a group of hereditary disorders which affect the Retina — the light sensitive tissue at the back of the eye, where the retina cells die leading to sight loss and blindness. About 25,000 people in the UK have RP and at present there is no know cure. In some cases both sight and hearing are lost. RP can be very aggressive in the young.

Take part in this event and help us in our fight against RP, and give hope to all those across the UK who are losing their sight. To find out more go to: <http://tinyurl.com/leamspace>
